We live in a time marked by multiple crises in the world, as well as in the Catholic Church and theology. Those crises urgently require new ways of solving problems.

Also this year, within the framework of an international research cooperation between Bochum and Zagreb, there will be the opportunity to locate and present individual research projects within the horizon of the seminar topic. Emerging questions will be elaborated, and the directions in which answers can be sought will be shown. The seminar is an opportunity for students to present and discuss their research in an international environment and interdisciplinary dialogue, and therefore move further on with their work.
